THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1887.

In a recent book on the Constitution Italy it is explained that every representative who is returned to the Chamber of Deputies is returned not as the member for an individual constituency, but as a member for the country. It is also stated that candidates for seats in the Chamber are forbidden to make promises of benefits to their constituents and that the making of such promises is regarded as a public offence. These sound principles, but such political disinterestedness would be regarded by our own Parliamentary representatives as identical with Quixotism, and impossible. Most of them would go upon exactly the opposite tack. Promising to get this bridge built and that road constructed help many a candidate to a seat in the Legislature, and when a politician of this sort has gained the seat, he is only able to keep it by obtaining for his constituents a share of the good things that Parliament dispenses. Even members whose seats are apparently safe cannot look with indifference on the exertions of other members, who are striving to get for their constituencies something that they did not possess before. I even one member lay himself out for a little vote, and they are on the track too. We have a remarkable illustration of this at the present moment. One member throws out a feeler, and half a dozen others are up and doing at once.

On Tuesday Mr. FLETCHER gave notice to the Assembly of his intention of moving a vote of £4000 towards the erection of a trades hall for Newcastle. The idea at once gathered together, and a combination attack is now made on the carcass of the Treasury. It is suddenly discovered that trades halls are a necessity in all sort of places—in country districts as well as the suburbs, in the humble hamlet as well in the ambitious township. Mr. TONKIN wants £3000 for a trades hall at Bathurst.

Mr. BALL, Mr. STEPHEN, and Mr. HUGH FAYELL ask for grants of about the same amount for similar structures at Goulburn, Renfern, and Parramatta, while Mr. CHURCHILL goes into the thing wholesale, a calmly proposes that the Assembly should vote the sum of £4000 in each year for trades halls at Lismore, Casino, Corran, Ballina, Woodburn, Broadwater, Bryn Bay, The Brunswick, Tumbulgun, Mullumbillah, and the Tweed Heads. Mr. THOMPSON and Mr. IVES vary the thing a little the former proposing to spend £5000 the people's money upon a town hall and markets at West Maitland; while the latter, twice as generous with the State funds, suggests the propriety expending £10,000 in the erection of a general market at St. Leonards. Not to be out of the swim altogether, another member—MRS. HASSALL—who is unable, perhaps, to make the trades hall idea fit in with the circumstances of his electorate, suggests that the Assembly should vote £20,000 for the purpose of enabling the aborigines of the Northern districts to hold grand corroborees on the banks of the Darling River, at Moree, on the 28th January next in honour of the Centenary of the colonisation of the continent.

ions, an still more difficult to keep together, when formed, in the ready pursuit of a common plan of action. Being larger interests than the workmen at stake, and having in their course of their business developed an inveterate spirit of independent competition, they have not been so ready as the workmen to transcend individual and immediate interests for the sake of future and general good. In the United States, however, whether it be through pressure produced by protection, or as the result of other influences, circumstances appear to have favoured different results. Our correspondent reports two serious attempts—the the others to the silverminers of New York, and the master builders and contractors of Chicago—to destroy the power of labour organisations or to break them up. The silverminers have discharged their hands, and told them that they will only re-engage them as non-union men. The builders and contractors, although forming already more powerful body, which is intended to avert its ramifications in all parts of the State, have contented themselves with the proposal to stop work, and only resume it if the tide unions will agree to their

In the meantime, there is doubt as to which side will gain the victory. The workmen appear to be relying upon the belief that an association of employers for the purpose of dictating terms to the employed is liable to be proceeded against as a conspiracy. Whether it is so or not is a question of no slight interest. We do not know how the law of the United States stands in this matter, but upon the surface it looks like a rather clumsy joke for such position to be assumed by trade unions or fair members. It is difficult to suppose that the law of the United States can be so one-sided as to prohibit combinations of employers and permit combinations of the employed. It is easy to understand that intimidation could be prohibited on both sides. But what is intimidation? If the term cannot be applied to a specific declaration the terms upon which alone employment will be given, it is as truly applicable to a specific declaration of the terms upon which alone employment will be accepted. There is no more necessity for regarding this intimidation on the part of associated employers if they refuse to give work to union men, than there would be in the case of associated workmen who refuse to work with non-union men. Intimidation does not consist in setting forth explicitly the terms of possible contract on either side. It consists rather in attempts made directly or indirectly to force people into contracts on terms of which they are unwilling to accept, or to prevent them from entering into contracts on terms which they are willing to accept. Neither a strike nor a lock-out is necessarily an act of intimidation, nor boycotting almost necessarily so. If the principle of association for the prescription of terms is (where intimidation is not necessarily involved) sanctioned by the law of the United States, it should be sanctioned on the side of capital as well as on the side of labor. that of fear. Unless it be so the ultimate consequence of drawing the distinction between them should be the abolition of private employment, and the assumption of the whole business of the community by the State. The issue of its struggle will afford some test of the progress and influence of socialist principles in the United States. Our correspondent, looking forward to the possibility of a trial to determine the limit of the employers' rights in this respect, remarks that "if successful in convicting a boss or two, the present district attorney would be absolutely

Sir SAMUEL GRIFFITH, returning from the London Conference, sheds upon the matter a flood of fresh light. We were all in the good of fortune. Unfortunately, the new illumination reveals rather than make the darkness visible than to dispel it. "The reports of the meetings of the Council were."

reference came to the Australian people. The statement, "very misleading, and many cases constantly incorrect, for, as the members of the Conference were urged not to disclose its proceedings, no real reliable information was obtainable." The first of which this statement suggests is, that there must have been a terrible amount of money such telegrams which we all read will have such absorbing interest. The next is, then, if we were all in the dark and satrapy then, and are so still, we must remain in the condition unless the pledge be removed; as how under such circumstances we are to deal with the resolutions of the Congress? SIDDIKIE tells us that the good to be accomplished by the Conference will be neutralised unless various colonial Parliaments adopt similar resolutions. The Premier of Queensland has announced that he intends to bring forward a Bill to amend the Constitution, so that the Commonwealth Parliament shall have power to pass laws for the better government of the Commonwealth and its people, and if he imagines that other colonial Parliaments will adopt these resolutions without a full and explicit statement of the circumstances under which, and the reasons for which, they were passed, he may be very much mistaken. It is scarcely likely, at an rate, that our Parliament will quietly acquiesce in such treatment. It may be admitted that reticence was necessary in connection with some delicate questions that we discussed at the Conference, but it is not necessary to be reticent in connection with the question of the Commonwealth's power to legislate for the better government of the Commonwealth and its people.

It might be unwelcome to everything adding British and colonial interests to the observation of the world. But the secrecy and mystery with which it seems the proceedings of the Conference are to be enshrouded are repugnant to the genius of our institutions, and will tend to prejudice everything that the Conference is done or has attempted to do. Sir SARCEY is of opinion that the Conference will be productive of "a vast amount of good" to the colonies. The people of Queensland are in course of liberty to take this opinion at its own valuation. But if Sir PATRICK JENNINGS and Sir ROBERT WILSON were with a handful of such assurances, to present to them for what they were worth, and arduously as a fair equivalent for the money which their mission has cost us. Amid all the mystery about the proceedings of the Conference we look in vain for evidence of a vast amount of good." It has been said that the Conference just held is the first of a series. If so, and future Conferences are to condemn the complicity of the colonies, it will be well to consider that they are in a different manner. Sir SARGENT says that he "was enabled to arrange matters by a few conversations in which formerly would have required years of tedious correspondence to accomplish." There must be some truth in that; but it is a more satisfactory in public affairs there is sometimes more satisfaction in having arrangements set forth in black and white than in trusting to private conversations, the recollection of which, retained by the parties concerned, may differ. Besides, if Sir SAMUEL GRAFFIETH can converse successfully, why should

THE REVISION OF THE TREATIES WITH JAPAN.

The Hongkong Daily Press publishes the following telegram from its Yokohama correspondent relative to the revision of the treaties with Japan:—

"The first step in the treaty revision business has been completed, an agreement having been signed embodying the principles on which the revision is to be carried out. All the Treaty Powers are parties to this agreement, with opened to foreign trade two years after the signing of the treaties, foreigners in the interior to be subject to Japanese jurisdiction. The settlements at Yokohama and the other treaty ports will come under Japanese jurisdiction (the foreign courts being withdrawn) three years after the signing of the treaty, provided that Japan shall by that time have established courts for all districts where foreigners are trading. In connection with these courts, 30 barristers-at-law or solicitors are to be engaged at a salary of £380 or £4000 a year, for a period of 16 years, in cases when foreigners are concerned. Japan shall remove her tariff, and will increase the duty

THE DISPOSAL OF SEWAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your leading article re the disposal of sewage, about the motion of proposing a reward of £5000 for the best means of same, contains already, in my opinion, the very means of solving his question: Combine the carting of the sewage to the sewage works by the machine which you my is in use in Leningrad, and you are not in this colony, and Having been a resident of mine for the above question would arise, knowing that sooner or later when quite recently on a trip I made it a business of mine for means of emptying cesspits of the old country, the digger, &c., away in a manner that the unpleasant and disagreeable gases emanating therefrom would not be so offensive. For this I found from inquiries and personal observations a very effective means in the Klet process and carts, and I subsequently obtained estimates for these, according to which the apparatus, with carts, &c., for stove or suburn of 5000 inhabitants would cost about $400 $200, and of 10,000 inhabitants would cost about $400.

I should think that the agricultural districts near a great city cannot afford to lose all the natural fertilizing manure, and that the case of all will be met by getting rid of the sewage matter without annoyance to any one, and by transferring same into fertilizing matter of a kind easily handled, which would be the case with the manure from the Birmingham machine. I am, &c.,

H. B. STRANTZEN.

THE WESTINGHOUSE BRAKE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Any suggestion which may add to the safety of railway travelling will, I am sure, be welcome.

I venture, therefore, to write a few sentences respecting what is, perhaps, a defect of the Westinghouse brake. As it is now applied, the charge and control of the whole train is in the hands of the engine-driver. The guard has scarcely any power or control over the train. The chamber its power of applying the brake. The guard may, by opening a valve, throw on the brake, but there is no connection with that valve from the inside of the guard's van. The valve exists, it is true, but it is beyond the reach of the guard while the train is in motion. It is therefore practically useless.

It would suggest that a connection should be made, so that the guard could throw on the brake quite independently of the driver of the engine. In other words, it ought to be considered whether there is any possibility of an engine failing at any time to keep the chambers stored with power, and thus jeopardizing the safety of the train; and if so, whether the chamber should not be fixed under every was at the rear of the train, which was cases of emergency by the guard in charge.

The guard a few months ago, with the old-fashioned screw-brake, shared the responsibility, and had some work to do; the guard of to-day is but of little use, excepting when a train is taking in or discharging passengers.
